WEALTHY MAN DIES UNDER BLAZING AUTO:

Car Struck Horse and Turned Turtle, Gasoline Tank

Exploding.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 30. Folk living along the turnpike beween Newtown and Stepney, ten miles from Danbury, were arouse last evening by an explosion. They ran out to find an overturned automobile blasing furiously. About it staggered a man, his right arm hanging helpless at his side. Blood poured from his ears and mouth, but despite the flames, he tore at the wreck of the motor car and from him the rescuers learned that Charles M. Godfrey, a wealthy youth of Brewster, N. Y., was pinned beneath it.

While some cared for the injurenan, who was Joseph M. Clark, manager of the Brewster Hotel in Brewster, others turned to the wrecked car, quenched the flames somewhat with sand and dirt and moved the car enough to reveal the body of Godfrey. He was dead; his body was terribly burned.

Clark was burried in another automobile to St. Vincent's hospital here. The young men were on their way to call on a young woman of this town to whom Godfrey was engaged. They were travelling rapidly down Chest-nut hill when the glare of their head-light revealed a stray horse standing in the road. The lights blinded the animal.

The car struck the animal and turned turtle. Clark was flung out, but Godfrey, pinned in by the steering wheel, was held in the overturned car. The gasoline tank exploded. Godfrey was twenty-six years old and was the heir of George Hall, a wealthy hay, grain and feed dealer of Brewster, who died recently. Godfrey had been continuing the business. Clark is in serious condition here, but is expected to recover.
